

Money Doesn't Grow on Trees

How many of you heard your parents say "Money doesn't grow on trees" when you were a kid? Well, my grandkids know, as apparently does Fisher Price, that money comes from a bank.

Fisher-Price

MAGIC MONEY MACHINE

ATM front

This particular banking machine is a toy made by Fisher Price that we received over 25 years ago, when our eldest son was a toddler. It looks like a two sided ATM, with plastic coins and "dollar" bills.

coins and bills

The coins go in a slot on the top left corner, something our two year old grandson loves to do, over and over. As he no longer puts everything in his mouth, when he is here he fishes the coins out of the "off limits for his one year old cousin" bag they are stored in.

One side of the machine also has a slot to stick the five green dollar bills in. Once the coins and dollar bills are inside the machine, there are separate (one red and one blue, see top picture) buttons to push to eject them.

The ATM also comes with two realistic looking plastic credit cards, although the orange one was missing when I searched for it to take a picture. Maybe I better report that to the bank, LOL.
